CHIEF JUSTICE SHEA'S SPLENDID RIG AS NEPTUNE.

ing the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans Jus the Pinest Thing Out.

From the Home Journal.

We surrender considerable space to-day to a festival conceived and executed by a well-known gentleman of this city. He enjoys an enviable reputation for his hospitalities, and deservedly, for, as this example shows, he brings to his social constructions the thought of the poet and eye of the artist. He was recently in California, on the Pacific coast, about to return to his home on the Atlantic; the happy fancy occurred to him to celebrate the marriage of the world's two great occans. The celebration of which we now offer an outline made a fitting conclusion of the series of Noctes Attiew which have elivened his home during the season and formed a notable feature of our metropolitan society. Among the guests were:

Chief Justice Shea appeared as Neptune Chief Justice Shea appeared as Neptune. He was wrapped in a gorgeous toga of silver and blue broands richly embroidered with seed pearls and sands of gold lwith fleah-colored stockings. He were a golden crown, embossed with pearls and corals, his head was covered with senweed, and seaweed floated from his beard. His crown was ornamented with a trident, and he held in his hand a gold trident wreathed with sea flowers.

Atlantis, Gen. George W. Cullum, and Pacifica, Commodore Baldwin, were also habited in togas of blue and silver, the colors of occan. Atlantis and the bride Pacifica took their places on either side of Neptune, who loudly asked why he was called from his imperial realin.

asked why he was called from his imperial realm.

The host, Mr. John W. Hamersley, as Paranymfus, in white linen toga, crowned with roses, then appeared and made the initiative address, in which he pathetically pictured the cruef destiny which had separated the oceans, and doclaring his resolution to snatch the haurels from the brow of Henry Bergh, who had devoted himself to beasts, by consecrating all his energies to the emancipation of inanimate matter.

nurels from the brow of Henry Bergh, who had devoted himself to beasts, by consecrating all his energies to the emancipation of inanimate matter.

To the surprise of all, the Prairies rose up, at least sent their representative, Mr. Frederick J. De Poyster, who, decorated with cereals and grasses from the plains, presented his credentials of braided prairie grass. These duly acknowledged by the Monarch of Waters, the deputy made the following remarks: "O Father Neptune, Monarch of the Deep, to you I bring Pacifica, glad, yes, joyful to be rid of her. That whale over there wanted the honor, but he didn't get it. Whales have always been known to be great blowers, and the specimen present seems to have risen for this particular occasion because he understands so well how to spout. Now, listen why I bring the bride with joy to be well rid of her, pacific though she be." He then went on to state how, for centuries, trappers and miners and tourists had invaded his fair premises. The buffalowas gone, game had flown away. He was glad that a short cut was to be made by water, and he was very happy to be free of the bride, because she was a nuisance to the poor Indian.

At this the Cetacea of the Pacific, Mr. J. Hooker Hamersley, in a robe of small fishes with a dollth for a cap, rose up as if in anger, and brought down with thundering noise on the supportable an enormous fish, denouncing the espousals as a mésalliance. He maintained the higher caste of the Pacific an elevation of forty-two inches, superior size seventy millions of square miles while the Atlantic was only twenty-five million. Then he enlarged upon the injury to them, the fisheries and sporting grounds free, the disturbance arising from increase of commerce, the vulgarity of civilization, the pronences of the Yankee to barter. He warned Neptune that if he sanctioned this marriage the cetacea of the Pacific would strike for justice, and perhaps be driven to seek the remedy in "evolution."

Neptune looked thoughtful for a moment and then responded: "We will orginal poem that drew down thunders of applause.

Byseches were made, poems read, and toasts given by many of the guests, as well as by Mr. John W. Hamersley as Paranymius. Judge Bhsa was peculiarly fine in his poem. Mr. Edgar Fawcett, the Rev. Dr. Bandy, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Danl. B. du Chailiu, Mr. E. B. Gould, Dr. John Savage, John L. O'Sullivan, Gen. T. Watts Depeyster, and Joaquin Miller thus contributed to the delights of the evening. I During the rendering of these toasts and poems l'aranymius had prepared the "happy couple" by placing them in silver goblets, and when the applause whitch had greeted Mrs. Howe's poem had somewhat subsided, a large silver bowl, exquisitely embossed with relievos of Neptune and the Nalades sporting in the sea, was placed on the table. At a sign from the Monarch of Waters, Paranymius poured the contents of oach goblet into the bowl, and thus these waters, for the first time since creation's dawn, mingled together. Neptune in then threw a golden ring, fashioned in the form of a dolphin, into the mingled brine, as a token of his absolute dominion over all the seas of the world. Small vials labelled "Nuptials of the Atlantic and Pacific. June 2, 1882," were then filled from the bowl and given to each guest.

According to the classic custom of decision by lot, a number of black beans corresponding to the number of guests present were placed in a bag; one white bean, however, was thrown in, to designate the lucky finder as the possessor of the ring. The guests filed before the coveted prize, each in turn withdrawing a bean from the bag, which was held by Mr. Cortlandt De P. Field. Gen. di Cosnola was fortunate enough to draw the white bean, which declared him the winner of the ring.

Each poet in his turn was crowned with a laurel wreath by the Paranymius, and after the reading of the poem by Dr. Savage was concluded supper was announced. It would be impossible to name all the good things which were furnished forth from occan to prairie and from olive to pine. The centre piece

PHILADELPHIA DRINKING WATER. Contaminations which Kill Fish Reported Not to Injure the City's Surply.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20 .- A couple of weeks ago the water of the Schurlkill River at Reading and for thirty miles below took on novel and varied tints of blue and green, and many dead fishes were found on the banks of the river. The news created a panic in Philadel-phia. It was observed that the gills of the dead fish were covered with a white deposit, which, when analyzed, was discovered to be sulphate of lime. Some specimens of apparently dead catfish were found coated all over with that substance, and when it was scraped and washed off they swam away, seemingly as well as ever. The number of fish killed was greatly exaggerated, and since the discoloration of the water has disappeared, as it now has as far down as Pottstown, the fish are to be seen sporting in the clear stream in apparently undiminished numbers.

The analysis of the blue and green water below Reading, made by Dr. Zigier of Pottstown and Dr. Wiedman, President of the Health Board of Reading, revealed no poisonous mat-ter and nothing deleterious to health. Prof. ter and nothing deleterious to health. Prof. Charles M. Cresson, who has for a year exercised a supervision of the quality of the Philadelphia water supply, and Dr. J. Howard Taylor, Medical inspector of the Board of Health of this city, visited the scene of the trouble and made a thorough investigation of the subject. In an official report presented to the Board of Health, they say:

Near that city several tributaries empty into the river. The principal of these, the Tulpchocken and Maiden Creeks, relargely impregnated with line, which is acted upon by the mine water containing sulphuric acid, forming a precipitate, contesting mainly of the sulphate of line, which is sparingly soluble in cold water, gradually falls to the bottom of the river, and carries with it other impurities. After flowing a few inlies the water again becomes clear and improved inquality.

There is no a neral complaint about the Schuykill water supplied to this city. Not a trace of that discoloration came within twenty-five miles of Philadelphia, so far as anybody could see, and the city's analyst, Prof. Cresson, affirms that the water was never in better condition than it is now. Nevertheless, it is observable that in restaurants huge ice-water reservoirs are prominently displayed labelled, "Filtered water." Prudent, thirsty citizens go considerably out of the way to quaff from those supplies.

Accused of Immoral Conduct and Acquitted by the Jury.

READING, July 19 .- One of the most interesting trials of the summer in this section was the case of the Rev. Jesse Laros, which has just been concluded in Schuylkill County. Mr Laros is 58 years of age, and preached in Kutztown, this county. His circuit took him occasionally into the coal regions, and near Drehersville was the Evangelical Church, in which he preached. He is a married man, and the sojourn in the coal regions he temporarily resided with a family by the name of Miller. They were pious people, and had several children, one of whom was Ida, aged 15. In August with him in his carriage to Pottsville, where she was to have several teeth extracted.

She had money given her by her parents to return by rail. Instead of this, she was brought home by Mr. Laros in his carriage. Some six months afterward a criminal prosecution was instituted against the elergyman by the Millers, who alleged that he had been guilty of immoral conduct and indepent assault on Ida on his trips with her to Pottsville and back in his carriage. The Evangelical Church Conference at once appointed a committee and summorad the girl to appear. She refused. Diligent inquiry into the case was made, and, considering the minister's age, his excellent character, the length of time clapsed between the alleged outrage and the bringing of the prosecution, and the want of direct testimony, the Conference committee acquitted Mr. Laros, but he was not allowed to preach while the criminal prosecution was hanging over him.

The trial took place last week in the Pottsville court before Judge Gireen. A large number of ministers were with the defendant, and the court room was packed to overflowing. The girl Ida Miller, was jauntily dressed, and her straightforward, positive, and unshaken story created quite a sensation. The prosecution produced in court a trunk full of presentable girls of a similar character. Miss Miller positive, by him not to be tray him, but to keep their secret inviolate. Many witnesses testified that they had sold Mr. Laros some of these girls from Mr. Laros, and that she had been enjoined by him not to be tray him, but to keep their secret inviolate. Many witnesses testified that they had sold Mr. Laros some of these presents, and the girls story was corroborated in a number of points. Mr. Laros was on the stand nearly an entire day, and underwant the most thorough and searching cross-examination. He positively and underwant the most thorough and searching cross-examination. He positively and underwant the most thorough and searching cross-examination. He positively denied ever having committed any assault at any time upon the girl. He admitted having given the girl for a sample, by which she desired to sell albums to her return by rail. Instead of this, she was brought home by Mr. Laros in his carriage. Some six months afterward a criminal prosecution was

PROSPECT PARK ACCOUNTS.

Mr. Frederick Scholes Pinds Some Figures that he Calls Surprising. Ex-Supervisor and ex-Alderman Frederick scholes of Brocklyn has been looking over the report of the late Park Commissioners, and finds some figures that he says are surprising to any one outside of the Commission and its employees who is at all familiar with what has seen done in Prospect Park. Speaking on the subject recently, Mr. Scholes said; "It is very curious that, while the amount expended for maintenance of public parks is $9,408. I do not find anything charged for materials that could be used for repairs. The cost of maintenance must therefore have been for horses, carts, trucks, laborers, &c. The amount expended would have been sufficient to employ 6 trucks with two horses and driver 250 days, and 11 extra laborers 250 days. After diligent inquiry, and having myself considerable knowledge of the Park, I have not been able to discover where that amount of labor or its equivalent was expended.

"There is an item of $15,976 for maintaining edge of the Park, I have not obeen about ourcover where that amount of labor or its equivalent was expended.

"There is an item of $15,976 for maintaining structures in the Park. I presume this means for repairs. I have seen no repairs, except of the most petty kind, in the Park for five years.
I have tried my best, and in vain, to find out where any such sum could have been expended,
or any considerable sum. There is a charge made for in intenance of walks of $4,324. I go to the Park almost every day, and it is a mystery to me how it could have cost that sum for what repairs to walks I have seen. I notice an item of tol' for shooning horses. The Park Department owns fourteen horses for trucking, carrying coal, &c. A fair estimate for shoes for these horses would be twelve sets per year.
These, with the cost of putting on, would be worth $136. J. J. Cuyler, the engineer, gots an allowance of $558 for incidental expenses. The Park Department supplies him with a horse and wagon, and a furnished house, with two policemen to watch it.

"There is a charge of $2,942 for lumber. After examination I have been unable to discover where any such amount has been used, and believe that $550 would cover all legitimate expenses on this account. I observe a charge of $12,341 for maintenance of biantations. I presume this includes shrubbery and flower beds, with no charge for new plants. The sun charged would employ two gardeners in greenhouses, twelve other gardeners 250 days at $2, sixten laborers 200 days at $1,25 and three horses, trucks, and drivers. I have had oppotunities of judging, and know something about gardening, and I have never seen the amount of work done in the Park which could be done for that money. I have never seen the amount of work done in the fark which could be done
for that money. I have never seen the amount
of work done in the fark which could be done
for that money. I have never seen the amount of work done in the fark was allowed to pain the park
